IRAQ-KUWAIT: SITUATION REPORT #532

Oil Slick Update

South winds gave oil cleanup teams a break on Friday by pushing the large oil slick away from Saudi desalination and power plants on the Gulf coast, according to press. A Saudi oil expert said the wind has pushed the slick back where it was two days ago. Saudi authorities are using double rows of booms and skimmers at the port of Al Jubayl where desalination plants, a refinery plant, and a petrochemical complex are located. [redacted]
